An example punishment is in order. I own a software company. I use Microsoft products every day. I lost count of the Microsoft products that I have purchased over the last 15 years. I come to resent a lot of the arrogance in the company and it is reflected in their products. I believe some major steps should be taken to soften their powers.

True, their products do set the standards by which the masses have grown to depend upon.

I fear that they are looking to take steps to hurt other or eliminate competitors.
